It Tastes Good

One reason why Scott's Emulsion of Pure Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda has had such a large sale is because it is "Almost as palatable as milk," but the best reason is that its curative properties are unequalled. It cures the cough, supplies the waste of tissues, produces flesh and builds up the entire system.

To The Memory of Our Old Friend, Joseph Great-house, Husband of My Youngest Sister, the Pet Child of My Early Manhood.

The last act in the drama is closed for one more heart. Joseph Great-house was one of the best men I ever knew in an experience of seventy-seven years. He was not the smartest, as the flatterer of the world goes. He was unassuming—not a pretender, but a doer. He thought he was a Christian. In this he was mistaken. He was very much like many persons brought up in the clatter of the clergy, [often for revenue], who denounced the natural man as wicked by nature. He was much better than his church; so is almost everybody. His kind benevolent mind did not tell him he had a right to tell a lie, that the truth might more abound, or to cheat an infidel and hand over part of it to the Lord. He did not believe his wife was less than his equal. He had acted on this principle for 37 years.

And as to his children, he did not act toward them as if they were his chattels or owed him anything. He seemed to know that a demand of love or obedience forfeited confidence, and the willing act of love and fraternal sentiment between children and parents.

He was so much nature's man as to rule by a confederacy of interests, claiming no reward for doing his duty. He did not have to charge his memory with proper obligation and legal law.

He told me last summer at his home that all goodness came of the Christian religion. I said to him this cannot be so, truth and goodness never had a beginning; that so far as this globe is concerned, Christianity was modern,—of very late date, Christ taught, "Blessed are the poor," "Take no thought for the morrow," "Believe or be damned." Paul taught that woman was a mental. Christ taught, my friend, you must desert and, home, wife and children, and follow him to be a Christian. He said he thought it strange that he had never taken these things to heart.

Every neighbor knew of his devotion to his wife, and in his last will and testament he so ordered it that she be his sole executrix and guardian of his minor children, without bond.

I do not think he ever thought of dying or living on the goodness of another. As it was his highest satisfaction in helping others, so it should be ours in keeping right and wrong in their proper places. We only know how much our parents loved us by the love we have for our children and their children. A man has lived for something when his children love his name and respect his memory.

We, the living, would be lonely without the memory of our dead. The recollection of our long since dead, who plead and bled for the rights of man and downtrodden women, should stimulate the living to improve and perpetuate the universal happiness of mankind. Man cannot, nor never could read his destiny in this life nor beyond the grave.

Every one should be ashamed to pretend to live on the goodness of another. When we have finished our day's work and our sun is going down in the evening sky, the best reflections will be, like this noble man, we have done something to keep right and wrong in their proper places.

He was a man wonderfully pleased with himself, his wife and children and his surroundings. He was eminently social, loved his neighbors and right, because it was right. I do not think he ever thought of going to heaven because he had done the proper thing. He never alluded to such a thing or spoke of his religion or honor. He never fell out with others on the account of politics or religion. Duty is that which is due.

If the young could be taught the thoughts and experience of the old, they would start in life much beyond the present starting. They are not guarded against the pitfalls of life. It is much better to avoid a calamity than to repent afterwards. Repentance never puts a thing where it was before.

We are presumed to be living by providence in this country. In England and German empires when a bishop or nobleman dies they send him to heaven by acts of parliament, while we send ours to the same place by an act of providence.

May not these customs get into the minds of our children, so as to live a hap hazard, by hook or crook life. Mr. Jefferson's idea was to teach the children how to think; to take nothing for granted until it was examined. He wrote to his ward, (his sister's son), who was at college.

"I may not be at your examination. Nature has been kind to you. You have a good mind, use it; think, examine even the existence of God. If there should be one he will have no less respect for you because you have examined the matter."

If people will not talk of their thoughts, or write them down and have them discussed, they are of no more use than last night's dream. Who has any acquaintance with a priest, preacher or banker, who would allow, if they could help it, to call in question their methods of manipulating the labor of others, and living off of the masses, who foolishly allow others to think for them, while they live in poverty and the blessings of a far off country, (after death?) As a matter of business the classes can have no use for the dead after the funeral and the undertaker is done with them. The greatest problem in life is its sorrows. From some trouble not one is exempt.

The good book does not encourage thinking. Now, this precept may be all right for the clergy and the syndicates. While we allow them to think for us as a job, who pays the fiddler? Who will keep the wolf and the sheriff from the door?

If, as the good book says, the miseries of the damned in hell add to the joys of those in heaven it doesn't hold good on this planet. I am glad it does not. Are we to believe that God inspired one to write and another to contradict him. Were Paul and Barnabas inspired to quarrel with each other? In the old testament God is compared to wild and savage animals, as a unicorn, a leopard in the way, a young lion roaring on his prey, a bear besieged of his whelps.

The new testament compares God to a shepherd, a father, a saviour. Now which of these comparisons was inspired? Careful thinking conduces to careful living. Intellectual slovenliness leads to immoral, slipshod ways.

All the qualities which theology ascribe to God reciprocally destroy each other. After he made the world he then made man and woman and let them fall. A very careless nurse.

As for Jesus, he was much like our peddling politicians; if not he would never have made the bribery promises to his disciples—that as a reward for adhering to him, or his party, they should one day sit on the twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. He would never have uttered the revengeful words, "Whoever shall deny me before man, him will I also deny before my father which is in heaven." A poor tell tale boy to tell tales.

The protestants abuse the Roman Catholics for their pretence of forgiving sins and selling indulgences. What did Christ say,—for his priests say for him—"I will give unto thee the kingdom of heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven." And, "Whoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

A perfect being would not have taught, "Take no thought for the morrow." This idea is mean.

Nor did my friend believe that children were born wicked, as his experience of raising ten children contradicted that. First dogma, every observing mind must know, as the great patriot, Paine said a hundred years ago as they got sick, by contamination. It may be true that children made by God were wicked—but not being acquainted with them I can't say. My experience has been that children are born innocent—that they know nothing but fear and love, until corrupted by government at home or abroad.

I do know by experience that cruel parents make bad children. I think that is one reason why the children of the bible of God are prone to be wicked and arbitrary.

Loss of confidence is slavery; a mutual confidence is happiness and good will.

If God is almighty, unchangeable, the same this year as last year, and forever, what is the use to be paying some pretender to be preaching at him. The asperion on human nature, that all men have their price, is untrue—but it does include the man that says so. Like those dogs which hunt on their own account, the clergy is trying to establish a scientific God. It is more scientific to account for one fact than two miracles.

He Shot the Devil.

"Once upon a time," was the startling announcement made by G. W. Ryne to the Story Teller's Club, "At least I was as certain of it at the time as I am now that I was mistaken. One day I was particularly bad and the nurse expressed the opinion that the devil would get me before morning. She described him as an unrepenting gentleman dressed in black, with great fiery eyes and horns on his head. That night I lay awake and watched for him. He was standing by the door, and sure enough he was dressed in black, had eyes like saucers and unmistakable horns. I dived down under the bedclothing and shivered with apprehension. I finally had to come up for air and he was waiting for me. I was to frightened to cry, but I made a dash for the window and went through it without raising the sash. I rushed into my father's room in a hysterical condition and got the shotgun. He asked what I was going to do, and I replied that I was going to shoot the devil, and I did it, too. I rushed up to the broken window, inserted the muzzle of the gun, aimed at the big, staring eyes and pulled both triggers. His Satanic majesty came off his perch in one time and two motions. What was it? A big horned owl, sitting on a peg where hung the dress coat of the hired man."

A friend of mine, who evidently has been loving a bewitching siren, writes me that he is miserable and encloses the following clipping from the Harrisburg Independent, which, of itself, tells the situation:

"Cunningly wicked women, beautiful in blanchishments and reckless in TOWN TATTLE.

"And now the festive farmer Brings his apples into town, This size on the top side: 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 And this size further down: 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0"

There's a little man in Hartford, Most people call him Jim, Who keeps a livery stable— In truth, he keeps it in trim.

But he's such a constant joker, Such an everlasting pest— He's always "guying" some one, Nobody gets a rest.

He's a whole team and a canton, This clearly little Jim— A long lane always has a crook— The boys now guy him.

And this is how it happened, It was on 'lection day, you know, The Australian Ballot System, Was the way it had to go.

And Jim he voted early, At least he thought he did, And he came out smiling broadly, Not a single tooth was hid.

He was lively, he was funny, And was telling all the boys, When all at once he shuddered And made a gaping noise.

With quivering lips he whispered, "O, but me with a mallet, I'll swear before John Rhea, I failed to stamp my Ballot."

The crowd they wildly hooted, The "Rads," O, how they guyed him. The small boy fairly sniggered, The Democrats denied him.

They kicked him and they cuffed him, And drug him through the street; They pulled him and they yanked him Till ready for mince meat.

And now he's meek and lowly, Most any kid can kick him, And every Democrat he meets, He asks the Dem. to kick him.

If there is anybody in this world who is tired of living and who wants everybody else to kick him, it is that man in the recent election who passed in his ballot without stamping it.

One day last week while genial John Bean was clerking for Mr. Ross, a little fellow came into the meat shop and quietly and, it seemed, with malice and aforethought called for some "hog pork."

Now, I have heard of ham and shoulder and "midling," and jowl, and bacon, and spare-ribs, and "old ned" and sausage, and back-bones, and souse, and fresh pork, and salt pork, and pickled pork, but I'm free to confess that I never heard of "hog pork" before. Here, young man, have a chromo.

A young lady recently asked me what it would take to make a Model Kentucky Girl, and of course I didn't feel exactly like expressing myself, being afraid the picture I would draw would reach so far from her expectation that it might cause a catastrophe, in which I certainly would have been worsted, as I always have been in such instances. But I promised her that I would some day give her my opinion in regard to Kentucky girls, and I take this method of reaching the young lady in question. I propose to express myself in as few words as possible, and perhaps many a fair damsel will say I have described her, but I have no particular girl in my mind as I write these lines. The nearest I can describe her, is in the following lines of poetry, which I find in my scrap-book:

Her eyes would match the cloudless skies, When cloudless skies are bluest; Her heart will always take its part, When Kentucky girls hearts are truest.

Doat thou like the picture, young lady, if so I feel relieved and congrate myself that I am a Kentuckian, and in my younger days had a noble, true, dark blue-eyed sweetheart, and her heart always took its part and was always the truest. I can now look back over my past life and see that fair-eyed Kentucky girl, as she would greet me, always with a pleasant smile and a cordial welcome. My heart oftentimes beats in union with hers now, but when I think she is happy, living in a beautiful cottage alongside Kentucky's mountains, where the sun comes peeping in at morn, in a palace lifting to eternal summer, its walls from out a glossy bower of coolest foliage musical with birds, I can but envy the happy possessor of her heart. Father Time has left his finger-prints on my brow and I never more shall see those happy days. I have described my ideal Kentucky girl and also given a little history connected with my life; and I hope whenever I am called on to give my opinion of anyone I can do it as readily as I have tried to describe my Model Kentucky Girl.

action, are now the leading actors in some of the best concocted conspiracies to delude unwary men, rich, simple old debauchees, and involve the young and even the innocent in acts of shame and results of permanent disgrace. As a rule these women are highly educated, have had wide experience in their inclinations to do wrong, and enjoy positions in "society" for the time being, during which they are engaged snaring a victim. It frequently is the case that some of these women are in permanent "business" in a locality or there temporarily, pursuing what appears to be a reputable calling. One of the first efforts of this tribe of false pretenders is to secure the good will of some unsophisticated pastor of a church, as well as the acquaintance of prominent people, and once succeeding in this their way is open for the perpetration of acts which not only have vilified in them, but partake of villainies of the most desperate character. The men who fall into the clutches of these wretches are picked to pieces, blackmailed, harassed, and in some cases actually driven to despair and suicide. There is a public opinion crystallizing not exactly in favor of the victims of such creatures, who are too often ready to be caught, but in opposition to these sirens who carry sorrow and wretchedness into families and strew their paths with wrecks which affect the securities often of business and destroy fair character in the innocent."

AT BEDTIME I TAKE A PLEASANT SWEET DRINK

Hartford Republican

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1892.

The Democrats are more interested just now in a "tariff for office only" than for a tariff for revenue only.

There was a strong scent of, "I want to be appointed to some office" in most all the speeches at the ratification here Friday night.

The meteoric shower night before last may have been emblematic of the fall of Republican Postmasters about the 4th of next March. Who knows?

A bill has been introduced in the Alabama Legislature making the inviting proposition that persons whose tax amounts to less than $5, need not pay it if they did not vote at the previous election.

Mr. CLEVELAND has been so flooded with applications for office since his election that he has actually left home—pass our postoffice applicants a cold potato—as till the fourth of next March is a long time to wait, and be hungry, too.

One faction of our Democratic friends say that Free Trade and Free Silver go together, while the other faction think they are as far apart as the poles. There will be fun when this new Congress, Democratic in both Houses, meets.

The policy of the New Congress will be, doubtless, that of the old, an attack upon the Tariff in detail. Free wool, free lumber, free tin plate, free everything. Any check to our manufacturing industries and their employ of labor will but serve to awaken our people to the gravity of the situation.

Monday night, a week ago, the Beaver Dam Democrats had a big ratification and as the Hartford Democrats passed out of town on their way to assist in the fun, they were somewhat jubilant, and as they passed along opposite the Methodist Church, where the Holiness Convention was in session, some good brother rose and remarked on this wise: "While the Devil and the Democrats are gone to Beaver Dam to ratify we'll take this town for Christ."

The Glasgow Republican says: "Thirty-years ago H. C. Burris and Miss Celia Gilloc were married and lived happily together until the breaking out of the war, when Mr. Burris was enlisted, but was made a prisoner, but finally succeeded in escaping by killing a guard, and fled to the far west where he remained and was thought to be dead, until a few days ago when he returned and they were re-married. Mr. Burris, while in the far West, amassed quite a fortune and preferring to be buried in his native soil, will invest his money here and spend the remainder of his days in the land of his fathers."

Two men living near Cromwell, who had married sisters, fell out the other day and one chased the other with an axe drawn menacingly over his head, all because one of the brothers-in-law had grossly insulted the other by burning his wife's picture. Let the good wives of the country, who believe in having peace, henceforth, keep their pictures out of the reach of all their brothers-in-law. But who ever heard before of a husband raising a row because his wife's picture had been burnt? Come all wayward husbands, and learn a lesson here, a lesson of stronger devotion to your wives and—their pictures.

The Presidential Election.

The campaign is finished and the result of the election is the national success of the Democratic party, with its Free Trade platform. Does that result show the Protection cause lost, or the efforts in its behalf futile? Not at all, and this result need not be held surprising.

In 1890 came the great landslide toward Democracy and Tariff for revenue only—Free Trade thinly veiled. The election this year shows a gain in the popular vote for Protection, a gain in Republican members of Congress, but not gain enough to overturn the canvass of two years ago. We are going up, not down.

The country vote is for Republican Protection, but the city vote for Democratic Free Trade overcomes it. In New York and Chicago this is especially manifest. The vote of the country is more thoughtful and intelligent than that of the city. In New York City for instance, while we have able and thoughtful men, the crowd that shouts for Tammany is far less thoughtful than the farmers and mechanics and others in town and country. As for Protection being "a lost cause," that is impossible. If a home market for home industry, if the upbuilding in our midst of varied occupations—farm and mill, forest and mine near each other, exchanging easily, and all developing home resources and internal wealth—be the wise and true conduct of affairs, they cannot be lost. The Protective policy is on the gain in the civilized world, even in Great Britain, where the workingmen demand it. The election may check it here, but only for a time.

The Democratic party in the as-endant will have a path beset by perils. Let it "push things" toward its platform promise of Free Trade, and it will find great industrial enterprises, owned and managed by men of both parties in partnership, who will not be willing victims of politicians. Its household will be divided. The solid South—autocratic, domineering, lawless, possessed by the blindness of the old Slaveocracy of which it is the lingering remnant—will demand Free Trade. The men of practical business and industry South and North will say, "Go slow." Let the party inaugurate its platform policy, and the revolutions and disasters, the lack of employ and lowering of wages which would follow will sweep it out of power as by a whirlwind.

Let it hesitate and tinker and palter over Tariffs, and it will de-range business, check industry by its uncertainty, and show again its incompetency to frame a schedule of custom duties consistent with any policy or fit for any practical purpose—an incompetence shown in the Morrison and Wood and Mills jumbles of incongruities called Tariff bills, which did not even gain the united support of the Democrats in Congress in those days.

If the party does not push for Free Trade people will say: "You are brave and fair in promise, but cowardly and deceptive in performance. Away with you!" All looks fair now, but storms will rage and fierce blasts sweep in from every quarter when the Free Trade Democracy begins to "take its own medicine."

To-day Protection is defeated. The election of Harrison and Reid, representatives of its policy, with a Republican Congress to sustain it, would have been a signal and beneficent triumph—a help to civilization and to the culture and comfort of the people.

Our hope and expectation is that Protectionists, while willing to give the incoming administration fair trial, will watch and work, steadfast to their principles and positive in their attitude against Free Trade or Tariff for revenue only.

The time to begin "the campaign of education" is now, just after the election. The defeated army, conscious of its power and of the strength of its good cause, keeps sound in heart and heroic in mood, and rallies and drills for its coming victory.

Different Views.

Although the elections are over, and their result settled beyond a doubt, the politicians are doing their best to keep up the excitement which preceded them and to confuse the judgment of business men in regard to the future. As we have repeatedly pointed out, nothing demands any radical change by the victorious party in the nation's industrial and financial policy, and yet between them and their vanquished opponents the controversy has been renewed over the practical measure now to be adopted. Of course, we know that politics is a game in which the players are seeking to win, regardless of the means they employ, but the great multitude of citizens who look on and have to pay for the fun have more important interests. If they are wise they will insist there shall be no precipitate legislation by Congress, but that whatever is done shall be done cautiously and with due deliberation. The Republicans, aided by some judicious Democrats, insist that the great point at issue in the election was whether the Protection policy which has prevailed in this country for the last thirty years should be continued, or whether it should be abandoned for one of Free Trade. The majority of the people, they say, having decided in favor of Free Trade, the proper thing now is to carry out their wishes, and to do it as speedily as possible. Hence, they urge that the present Congress shall at once proceed to revise the tariff upon Free Trade lines; and if this Congress cannot complete the task during its final session, which ends next March, that the Congress, which regularly should not meet till a year hence, shall be called together for the purpose as soon as the present Congress expires.

J. Hawker James Replies. HARTFORD, KY. "In the year of the Devil and the election of Grover Cleveland, 1892."

My Dear Rowser Holbrook:—Your sweet-scented little bloated beauty, the less than one-sided idol, and speaker of the Wesley Calahan Democratic Club of Hartford, I address you for the purpose of humbly thanking you for locating a place for my safety and happiness during the terrific storms and cyclonic disasters that will result from the rulings of a Free Trade and brainless Democracy for the next four years, and as my safety is secured let me advise you to turn your attention now to the welfare of those who deserve recognition in the appointing powers of Rowser's party. Here's a list of appointments from Grover-elect:

WASHINGTON, D. C. "In the year of the Devil, Free Trade, Low Tariff, Hardtimes and my election, 1892."

1. I appoint my earnest supporter, J. Elephant Rowe, as Prosecutor, and Little Poor Loney as Secretary, and Bug Dust Ringo as Treasury, to prosecute, record and pay up for their failure in the Little Bend fraud.

2. I appoint Jubelant Curr Rile, minister to Hayti to fill the vacancy made by the resignation of Golly Washer Bunker.

3. That I appoint my four beloved beauties, James Woolly Ford, William Holler Moore, Tuffy J. Smith and E. Terifide Williams a committee to report the length of speech, the number in attendance and the result generally at Slow Kicking Cox's appointment before the election at Fordsville.

4. I appoint our beloved, Fearless Fighting Banjo Picker Democratic Brother, Wesley Calahan, Postmaster at Hartford, knowing from the past that he can give the bond required.

And last I appoint Fever 17. Foolish counsel, J. Stunted Glenn judge, to take charge of the bank now occupied by Brother Calahan, our co-worker, the same to be kept in perfect order, pillow and all for a resting place for our noted co-worker, Rowser Holbrook, for all time to come after the expiration of his term of office as county Clerk.

Signed: GROVER Dictated by, JAY HAWKER JAMES.

LONDSOME PLACE, 1892.

Mr. Jay Hawker James:—Sir, will you do me the favor to inform my young servant, Rowser Holbrook, that when I let him out to act as one of the Democratic Committee and to vote for Grover that he, Rowser, forgot to clean up his room? Tell him for God's sake to send Wesley Calahan down to sleep in a few nights to purify the air, for the stench is so strong I am fearful it will put out my fire.

Respy,

THE DEMOCRATIC DEVIL.

IGNORANCE AND NOBILITY. If through the ignorance of the noted Wesley Calahan promising to vote the Democratic ticket, caused him to lay in jail three months how long would as honest and honorable a man as Dan Hines have to lay in the penitentiary, if he had taken Rowser Holbrook up on his Rowser's proposition. Answer, Rowser.

JAY HAWKER JAMES, Shake em up.

To Our Patrons and Customers.

Always willing to show our patrons how much we appreciate their trade and positive that we can give them better goods for less money than anywhere else can do, we have decided to give with each $12.50 worth of goods,
